

Marriage at Kentyre.

There was a quiet marriage at the home of Mr. Frank McIntyre near Kentyre Sunday afternoon when Miss Ophelia Berry became the bride of Mr. Douglas McDonald, of Dillon. The ceremony was performed by Dr. A. G. Buckner and was witnessed by only the relatives of the two family and a few intimate friends. The bride is the niece of Mr. McIntyre with whom she and her mother have been making their home for several years. She is a young lady of attractive personality and is greatly loved and admired by a large circle of friends. The groom is a son of Mr. D. D. McDonald and has a large number of friends in Dillon who congratulate him upon having won such a charming life-partner. For the present the young couple are living with the groom's parents but it is their intention shortly to begin housekeeping in Dillon.

A Measuring Party.

A measuring party will be given at the home of Rev. Joel I. Allen Tuesday, March 14th from 4 to 5:30 in the afternoon and from 8 to 11 in the evening.

Plans and Specifications.

It is not a new political party, being social not socialists in character. Your altitude, or in simpler syllables, your longitude, determines your admission fee. You pay the cost of high living.

Five cents a foot and one cent for each additional inch.

Special Offer.

Two of you feet are admitted free—those that take you in.

If you are six feet you pay what you look like.

If you are five feet and four inches you pay twenty-five plus four, and no further tribute is levied. This is the long and short of it.

Tariff for Revenue at the Door.

Free Trade on the Inside. You see we serve refreshments within, without delay and without price.

After you've feed'd us we feed you on the refreshments aforesaid. And really, this sounds like reciprocity, doesn't it?

By the way, we will also have music. As Paderewski was engaged (or married) we have substituted a male quartette.

The function will be given under the auspices of the Young Woman's Auxiliary of the First Baptist church.

Come and stand upright, four square grey wind that blows and hold your head high—while you are being measured. No red tape about this, we use a yard stick.

This is all we can tell you about it. Come and learn the rest.

HENRY THE THIEF.*The Black Heart of the Greely Arctic Expedition.

One of the many tragedies of the Greely Arctic expedition was the execution of Private Henry, who had been caught time after time stealing food from the scant store of the starving party. Henry alone was strong and active, thanks to the stolen food and to the fact that he did no labor he could possibly shirk.

Lieutenant Greely had warned him, but to no avail, and finally, after a particularly despicable act of theft, the commander, in fear, that Henry's course would cause a general raid on the store of food and thus bring about the destruction of the whole party, condemned Henry to death.

The story of the execution, which makes a new page in history, is told in the American Magazine by Frank B. Copley, who got his idea direct from the survivors of the expedition. He writes:

"All his lethargy gone, Greely dismissed the man, seized pencil and paper and, with trembling, emaciated fingers, wrote:

"Near Cape Sabine, June, 6, 1884. 'Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick:

"Notwithstanding promises given by Private C. B. Henry yesterday, he has since, as acknowledged to me, tampered with seal seal things if not other food at the old camp. This pertinacity and audacity is the destruction of the party if not at once ended. Private Henry will be shot to-day, all care being taking to prevent him from injuring anyone, as his physical strength is greater than that of any two men. Decide the manner of his death by two ball and one blank cartridge. This order is imperative and absolutely necessary for any chance of life.

A. W. Greely."

"In the official report of the Lady Franklin bay expedition it is simply announced that 'shots were heard about two o'clock, and later the order was read to the general party.' The manner in which the order was executed here appears for the first time.

"Sergeants Brainard, Long and Frederick could not, as ordered, 'decide the manner of death by two balls and one blank cartridge. Greely had failed to take into consideration that at this time the party had left only one serviceable rifle.

"The three sergeants drew lots to see who would do the shooting. When they had done so they bound themselves with an oath that the identity of the man thus chosen should never be revealed.

"Henry was at the tent at Cemetery ridge with all the other men when the time for putting him to death came. What was to take place, of course, was known only to the three sergeants and the commander. Two of the sergeants remained in the vicinity of the old hut, while the third went to the tent to bring Henry down.

"The man who went for Henry told him that he was wanted at the old camp to help carry up some more of the supplies that had been left there. Suspecting nothing, Henry readily accompanied the sergeant to the place chosen for putting him to death.

"Now Greely had repeatedly cautioned the three sergeants to take no chances on Henry's getting away, for, although none at Cape Sabine knew the man's past history, enough of the man's black soul, had been revealed to make his comrades feel that no crime could be put past him.

"So Brainard, Long and Frederick, cautioned by their commander and warned by their own knowledge of the man with whom they had to deal, had decided that Henry should be made to stoop to pick up something and that then he should be shot from behind. At least one of these sergeants had no more compunction about killing him than he would have had about killing a mad dog.

"But one of the other two men weakened at the last moment. To shoot a man in cold blood from behind, to send him into eternity with no opportunity to compose his soul, was too terrible a thing for him to stand. It was a mistake that nearly proved disastrous.

"Henry was told face to face that he was to be put to death in accordance with the order of the commander, and he was advised to kneel and make peace with his God. At the same time the executioner appeared with his rifle at a convenient distance before the doomed man's eyes.

"Henry stood agape. He muttered something about something not being right. Near where the third sergeant stood an ax lay on the ground. Henry's gaze, searching the ax. He sprang for it. A warning cry was raised. The sergeant who stood near the ax jumped and got his foot on it almost as Henry was upon him. There was a cry of 'Quick!' Even then there was danger of the executioner shooting his fellow sergeant if his aim was the least unsteady.

"But despite all he had been through the aim of the executioner was true. The rifle cracked, and the bullet sped, penetrated the breast of the man for whom it was intended. Henry whirled, crying: 'You have tricked me!' Again the rifle cracked. The second bullet went through Henry's head, and he fell dead."

COUNT LOOKING FOR WORK.

"Honest Toil Not Degrading to Any One," Declares Von Ehrenfels. "I believe that honest and well-meant work is not degrading to anybody, no matter what his social standing may be or what title he bears."

The above answer was given an American reporter yesterday by Count Fred Egon Taglen von Ehrenfels, when he was asked his brother

The Count von Ehrenfels is the son of a wealthy German family. When he was fifteen years old, eleven years ago he came to this country and decided to stay. His family ordered him home. But he refused to go back. The remittances stopped and the Count got work as secretary to a German physician, whose death made it necessary for him to seek another job.
